Book Description

Gertrude Ederle was the first woman to swim across the English Channel. She accomplished this feat on August 6, 1926, at the age of 19. Her swim took 14 hours and 31 minutes, and she set a new world record for the crossing. Ederle's swim was a major triumph for women's sports, and it helped to inspire a generation of female athletes.

In this book, author [author name] tells the story of Ederle's life and career. He traces her journey from her humble beginnings in New York City to her Olympic success and her groundbreaking swim across the English Channel. Ederle's story is an inspiring tale of determination, perseverance, and courage. It is a story that will appeal to readers of all ages, and it is a must-read for anyone interested in the history of women's sports.
